Why answer a quick question here?

A question as the header works best. This area is good for a quick BLUF, and gives the reader a bit of context for why they are reading this document. Try to limit this answer paragraph to no more than 4-5 lines. This increases focus and limits cognitive load. White space is not wasted space.

Thing 1 vs Thing 2

What's the difference?

Thing 1	Thing 2
• Arrives first, full of ambition, but with no real plan. • Claims to be the original, but honestly, it's just as chaotic. • Slightly taller, but only because of the hair. • Has big "I started this mess, but I'm not cleaning it up" energy.	• Shows up later and acts like they know what they're doing. They do not. • Brings the same energy but with slightly more flair. • More likely to get caught in the act but also more likely to get away with it. • Smirks at Thing 1 because technically, sequels are always cooler.

Step-by-Step Process Thing

Note: this is a note you can use. It's just a table but calls attention to itself.

Week 1: Start Small, Target Engaged Users

- Send to your most engaged contacts first (those who open & click regularly).
- Start with 500–1,000 emails per day, then gradually increase.
- Split across different providers (Gmail, Yahoo, Outlook, etc.).
- Avoid promotional-heavy language—keep it simple & valuable.

Day 4: Don't forget to test

- Testing helps you identify gaps.
- Avoid common pitfalls.

Week 2: Increase Daily Volume by 2x

- Expand to slightly less engaged contacts, but still warm leads.
- Increase daily sends to 2,000–5,000 (but only if open rates stay good).
- Keep monitoring bounces, spam complaints, and unsubscribes (if they spike, slow down).

Week 3-4: Keep Scaling Steadily

- Slowly add more of your list, including newer or less engaged contacts.
- Aim for 5,000–20,000 per day by the end of the month.
- Keep your open rate above 15% (below that = providers get suspicious).
- If anything tanks (deliverability drops, spam complaints rise), pause and adjust.

Post-Warm-up (Full Scale Sending)

- By week 4+, you should be able to send at full volume if engagement metrics look good.
- If you hit 100,000+ emails per month, consider segmenting further to maintain deliverability.

Extra Tips to Stay Out of Spam

- ✓ Authenticate Your Domain – Set up SPF, DKIM, and DMARC. Learn DMARC is a great tool for troubleshooting any errors with auth.
- ✓ Send Valuable Emails – No spammy language ("FREE MONEY!" = instant blacklist).
- ✓ Keep Lists Clean – Don't buy lists. Only email people who actually signed up.
- ✓ Monitor Your Reputation – Use tools like Google Postmaster Tools and MXToolbox to track sender reputation.
- ✓ Stay Consistent – Don't send 100K one week and then nothing for a month. Providers like stability.
